

1. What is the purpose of a requirement document?
Spells out the requirements of the software & what it is supposed to do.
2. Why is written communication in the form of a requirement document needed for a web page?
Summarize where you are in the program development process. You need written communication to make sure things get done.
3. What does a data-flow diagram model? Represent how the data must flow through and be transformed by the information system.
4. What is data-flow diagram particularly useful for? Useful to show how to divide a process into component tasks.
5. When do you know you are done with the program design phase and ready to code? You are done when you can look at your model and say yeah, I know how to code it.